Romance of a Pair of Boots.

One day last week, as a clork in one of our handsome stores, where ladies principally do their shopping, was sitting disconsolate and alone, probably musing upon the transitory nature of all things, or, most probably, thinking how nice it would be to have some fond bosom on which to rest his weary head, and some kind ear to listen to and share his sorrows-while thus occupied, a fairy creature entered the store. Trancs when he arrested him. With The two were alone. She was young, the remainder he paid his personal exlanguishing and beautiful; he fund and devoted. She called for boots cape.
